transition element CALM BEFORE - AFTER

photographed
on top of
frozen water drops

BEFORE base water - "empty water"

To visualize "energies", a water is used which is barely able to produce crystalline forms on frozen drops. The shape on the left was considered significant for this water and therefore selected by the photographer.

"empty water"

AFTER transition element CALM

The bottle "transition element CALM" has been put into a cup filled with this empty water. Afterwards, drops of it were frozen and photographed under the microscope. The crystal on the right shows the change of shape. This crystal was considered significant and therefore chosen by the photographer.
