

Portable Pod User Guide

The ORYNOCO PORTABLE POD is a tool that can help you to expand your understanding of this technology and how information fields can be accessed.

The three included TSE cartridges carry information fields for support in the following ways; physical presence (red cartridge), and balanced energy release (yellow/cream cartridge), and core maintenance (white cartridge).

Physical presence is the ability of the body to recognize its place in this reality and to reaffirm we are in the right place at the right time.

Balanced energy release gives a resource for the body to draw on key minerals for energy conversion, for example: magnesium, potassium, copper

Core maintenance is about providing support for the balancing of blood and provides access to improved grounding.

Guidelines for Use - Remote and Local

The Portable Pod can be used all by itself, it does NOT require having access to any of our other products. The information below about using it with our other products is for individuals who already have our other products and wish to use them together.

1. Using the Portable as a standalone without attempting to connect it to any V4 Pods: just set it up, create the intention for all the work you do in its presence to be optimised and enhanced, and then do your session or group work as normal.

2. Connecting to your own V4 Pod remotely: therapists working in two locations can successfully use the Portable Pod as a satellite that is remotely connected to a WSU V4 POD by creating an intention to connect the two remotely as described herein. First place the Portable in the midst of the V4 Pod towers, like on the chair you would ordinarily sit on when using the V4.

Create an intention for the two fields to link and 'remember' their connection even when the Portable is in another location.

Then when using the Portable in another location, create the intention again for it to link to your V4 Pod remotely and brings its field present.

Then create the intention for all the work you will do in the presence of the Portable Pod to be optimised and enhanced; then do your session or group work as normal.

3. Connecting to the planetary V4 Pod field remotely (if you don't have your own V4 Pod): setup the Portable in as energetically clear an environment as possible.

Create an intention for the Portable's field to link to all the interconnecting fields of all the V4 Pods on the planet, and to then 'remember' that connection regardless of where your Portable is located. Leave it in this mode for a few hours then consciously conclude that resonance entrainment session.

Then when using the Portable Pod, create an intention for it to link to the planetary field of all V4 Pods it was entrained to, and to then bring that field present into the space it is located in for the benefit of whomever is experiencing the Portable Pod's field.

The Purpose of the Adjustable Head Angle

This feature is so that you can position the head with its coil (the black area in the tube) at different angles. This is a nod to Bio Geometry, which is a science about the quality of the space you occupy, and the energy and interactions of the energy in that space.

Changing the angle of the head-coil will change the interaction with the space it is in. We have found that a vertically positioned coil is a real quick and easy way to bring balance to an individual or a space, provided the space is not too large.

Using the coil horizontally positioned will invoke a longer balancing effect, and the effects can be deeper than when it is in the vertical position.

The 45 degree angle position right in-between vertical and horizontal, offers a combination of these two characteristics and which predominates is to some degree determined by the space it is in and the individuals interacting with its field.

Experiment, and you will get to know which angle works best for you, and in which circumstances. We usually make an assessment with a sensitive person initially and then change the angle to see the response. An energetically sensitive person will also be able to feel this themselves and go from there.

